Putting Developmental Psychology at the Service of Parents and Teachers

Seminar 1

Title: Developing the Social and Emotional Intelligence of Children and Adolescents
Date: November 24, 2007
Speaker: Dr. Grace Koo

Description:

Several research studies show that emotional intelligence is crucial in building the foundations for educational, social, and vocational success. Experts in the field say that it can be learned and developed at all ages, but the earlier, the better. An emotionally secure child will be more independent, confident, tolerant, emphatic, and nonviolent as a child and later as an adult. This seminar aims to provide parents and teachers a practical guide for helping young children develop social and emotional intelligence.

Seminar Fee: P1,200.00

Early Bird Registration (until Nov. 12, 2007): P1,000.00

Seminar 2

Title: Nurturing Resiliency in Children
Date: January 26, 2008
Speaker: Dr. Angelito Antonio

Description:

Why can some children cope with and survive stressful situations while others break down? The same may be asked about families. Why do some of them manage to deal with very trying circumstances while others fall apart? How does one develop resiliency—the ability to deal with adversity, bounce back, and manage change?

Resiliency as an emerging phenomenon in child development practice and family studies will be the focus of this half-day seminar. Students in Developmental Psychology and Child Studies, teachers, parents, child care professionals, and guidance counselors will find this seminar valuable for helping children and families cope with and manage stress.

Seminar Fee: P1,200.00

Early Bird Registration (until Dec. 14, 2007): P1,000.00

Seminar 3

Title: Raising Moral Children
Date: February 23, 2008
Speaker: Dr. Gladys Golo

Description:

Raising moral children is a very challenging job for parents and teachers today. This seminar will analyze the moral language of children, offer strategies for developing a child's capacity to understand right from wrong, and discuss the inclusion of moral emotions as part of a child's repertoire in the complex process of moral development. This seminar aims to integrate moral development theories into a consistent yet dynamic approach to education.

Seminar Fee: P1,200.00

Early Bird Registration (until Jan. 23, 2008): P1,000.00

Seminar 4

Title: Understanding and Dealing with Developmental Delays in Children
Date: March 29, 2008
Speaker: Dr. Angelito Antonio

Description:

Developmental delays affect many children and often go undetected until an alert and caring parent or teacher recognizes that there is a problem. In this highly interactive half-day seminar, the speaker will engage parents and teachers of young children in a conversation on how to help identify and deal with a child who might be delayed in cognitive, physical, or emotional development.

Seminar Fee: P1,200.00

Early Bird Registration (until Feb. 29, 2008): P1,000.00

All seminars will be held at PLDT Hall, UA&P, from 8:00 to 12:00 a.m.
